

Experienced editorial project manager looking for a challenge?

About us

Pope Woodhead and Associates provides specialist communications and consultancy services to European and International pharmaceutical and biotech companies. We have a reputation for helping our clients address strategic challenges often spanning both development (e.g. clinical development, risk management), and commercial activities. Current areas of communications work include; disease area and product communications, advisory boards/workshops, market access and value communications, external affairs, corporate communications, internal communications and training materials.

What we are looking for

We are looking for experienced communications professionals with strong project management and editorial skills. The ability to work with a design studio on both print and multimedia projects would also be a distinct advantage.

This is a hands-on role, delivering projects in various therapeutic areas. We are looking for someone who is highly organised and comfortable juggling multiple projects.

Candidates must have a relevant scientific first degree and a strong background in medical communications. The ability to prioritise and demonstrate attention to detail and proven writing/editing ability are a prerequisite.

What we offer

Pope Woodhead is a medium-sized company based in the St Ives, north of Cambridge. We have been established for over 25 years and are currently operating in some of the most rapidly moving areas of healthcare.

The successful candidate will receive a competitive package. We support continued personal development and offer the potential of rapid career development within the organisation.

We are keen to meet enthusiastic, flexible, talented applicants for the role of Editorial Project Manager.
